"heartaches by the number" takes the reader all the way from patsy montana's "i want to be a cowboy's sweetheart" and hank williams's "i saw the light" to merle haggard's "mama tried" and lee ann womack's "i hope you dance." it includes classics like patsy cline's "crazy," gene autry's "back in the saddle again," dolly parton's "i will always love you," george jones's "he stopped loving her today," and garth brooks's "the dance," plus surprises from the likes of bing crosby, elvis presley, and ray charles, among others. part encyclopedia, part history, part collection of record reviews, yet not quite any of these things, "heartaches by the number" isinstead an argument for a sensibility, a way of hearing. it's comprised of critical essays that each can stand alone, but that, when read in sequence, comment upon each other and tell a larger story--one that challenges and redefines what country music is and what it can mean "co-published with the country music foundation press" ...more	Readable/Downloadable

ENCOUNTERING DEVELOPMENT: THE MAKING AND UNMAKING OF THE THIRD WORLD (PRINCETON STUDIES IN CULTURE/POWER/HISTORY)

how did the industrialized nations of north america and europe come to be seen as the appropriate models for post-world war ii societies in asia, africa, and latin america? how did the postwar discourse on development actually create the so-called third world? and what will happen when development ideology collapses? to answer these questions, arturo escobar shows how development policies became mechanisms of control that were just as pervasive and effective as their colonial counterparts. the development apparatus generated categories powerful enough to shape the thinking even of its occasional critics while poverty and hunger became widespread. "development" was not even partially "deconstructed" until the 1980s, when new tools for analyzing the representation of social reality were applied to specific "third world" cases. here escobar deploys these new techniques in a provocative analysis of development discourse and practice in general, concluding with a discussion of alternative visions for a postdevelopment era. escobar emphasizes the role of economists in development discourse—his case study of colombia demonstrates that the economization of food resulted in ambitious plans, and more hunger. to depict the production of knowledge and power in other development fields, the author shows how peasants, women, and nature became objects of knowledge and targets of power under the "gaze of experts." ...more
